I and the Three Brothers I and the Three Brothers (1909) is an oil on canvas painting by the British artist Dorothy Tennant. The title is a reference to Three Blind Mice, a nursery rhyme which becomes more notable in later versions with the additional line "He has eyes, he has eyes, he has eyes, / What a wonderful man, what a wonderful man". Tennant was inspired to paint this work after a visit to Ireland with her brother John Tennant in 1908, where he encountered the Morris dancing. The painting was first exhibited at the Royal Academy Summer Exhibition in 1909 and was included in the first retrospective exhibition of her work at the Tate in 1914. Prevalence of HPyV-6 DNA in frozen or FFPE samples collected from blood donors. Human polyomaviruses (HPyVs) are ubiquitous. They can induce respiratory and gastrointestinal diseases and are also involved in the development of lymphoproliferative diseases. However, the roles of these viruses in the induction of these diseases remain unclear. The aim of the study was to investigate the presence of HPyVs in human blood. We analyzed prevalence of HPyV-6 and KI virus (KIV) in blood donors. If any viral DNA was found, a nested polymerase chain reaction (nPCR) technique was used to investigate its genotype and determine the level of viral load. A total of 147 frozen blood samples and 33 formalin-fixed paraffin-embedded (FFPE) blood samples were analyzed in this study. Among the 147 frozen blood samples, 32 (21.8%) were positive for HPyV-6 DNA and 1 (0.7%) for KIV DNA; in contrast, no HPyV-6 DNA was detected in 33 FFPE samples. Of the 32 HPyV-6 DNA-positive frozen blood samples, the genotypes were JCV and BKV in 7 and 7 samples, respectively; VLPV in 10 samples; JCY in 13 samples; and WUPyV in 2 samples. None of the samples was positive for JCPyV. To the best of our knowledge, this is the first study to show the presence of JCV and BKV DNA in peripheral blood. However, further investigation is needed to determine the role of HPyVs, including JCV and BKV, in the development of diseases.
